Common coolant related issues

AERATION

- Air leaks into the cooling system will promote foam generation in the coolant
- This in turn promotes pitting which is most noticeable around water pump impellers
- Inhibitor packages contain anti-foaming additives

CAVITATION CORROSION/EROSION

- Heavy-duty applications
- Piston vibration causes formation of bubbles on wall of liner and subsequent collapse (shock wave impact of 15 to 20,000PSI)
- Hammering action drives through liner to allow coolant to mix with lubes or escape into combustion chambers

Example of cavitation corrosion

Free Coolant Test

Have you lost an engine and wish you could have caught the problem before the point of no return? Or better yet, what if you could determine the root cause all together?

Monitoring the coolant's additive health is very important and ensures correct cooling system operation. Maximise your engines performance and life, keep maintenance costs down, avoid unnecessary downtime, and extend your coolant life by adding coolant testing into your maintenance program.

Speak to one of the Penske aftersales representatives or your local Penske Australia branch about a free coolant test.
